ABOUT GRADY

Sitting in the heart of downtown Atlanta, Grady Health System leads the way as the Southeast’s most essential healthcare provider. We’ve been an innovator since opening our doors in 1892, and providing cutting-edge care to all patients who need us continues to be our mission to this very day. Our singular objective is to become the nation’s finest public academic healthcare system. We know we can only deliver against that objective by providing outstanding, personalized care – one patient at a time – to every person we are honored to serve.
Every day, Grady is there to help Atlanta heal. From primary care services to pioneering stroke treatment to the state’s only adult and pediatric burn center, you can count on Grady to make Atlanta and the surrounding region healthier.
Willie Wisdom was driving his grandchild to the bus when he started having seizures. Rushed to Grady, he suffered a massive heart attack. Rapid intervention by Dr. Michael McDaniel and the cardiac team saved his life. Now, with several stents and a defibrillator, Willie is back enjoying life — and his five grandchildren. “I call Dr. McDaniel my guardian angel.”

Effective treatment of heart attack is all about speed. With our new expanded capabilities Grady is now on par with any hospital in the region. Success requires a dedicated team — nurses, EMTs and physicians — and our team is a great one.

A former singer and actress born nearly 94 years ago in Bogota, Colombia, Carolina Molano has seen a lot. But when it comes to dedicated medical care, nothing compares to her physician, Dr. Iris Castro-Revoredo, an internal medicine specialist at Grady. Ms. Molano has been a Grady patient for over a decade. “All the doctors there have been wonderful, and Dr. Castro is so caring. She communicates with my cardiologist, calls to check on me regularly, and tells me to call her whenever I need something. They are so well-organized and I never have to wait. That’s why I love Grady so very much.”

Delivering personalized care that meets the individual needs of each patient requires a staff with a real passion for service. The doctors, nurses and staff in the Primary Care Centers go the extra mile every day, applying their medical, administrative and language skills to develop cultural understanding that guides the care of our diverse patient population.

After Chrystal Davis suffered five late-term miscarriages under the care of other hospitals, her 20-year dream of becoming a mother looked out of reach. Then she turned to Grady and Dr. Franklyn Geary, Morehouse Chief of Service, Grady Women’s Center. He’s an expert in complex, high-risk pregnancies, and his care made all the difference. “Dr. Geary’s personality is amazing. He is kind, patient and reassuring and kept telling me, ‘We’re going to have this baby.’ I came to Grady for my miracle — and I got it.”

The comprehensive maternity care we offer is tailored to the unique needs of each patient. It encompasses physicians, anesthesiologists, social workers, lactation consultants, dedicated nurse case managers and language interpreters. This complete team approach helps create a better experience and better outcomes for mothers and their babies.

On Dec. 18, 2015, a jog and pub crawl with friends nearly ended in tragedy when Homer Bartlett fell to the floor and went into cardiac arrest. Atlanta Fire Rescue responded within minutes and used an AED to restore his heart rhythm. They were quickly joined by Grady paramedics with specialized cardiac training. The quick actions saved Homer’s life. After seven stents and cardiac rehab, today Homer is back to riding his bike to work, playing soccer and even enjoying a beer with friends.

A strong collaboration between Grady EMS and Atlanta Fire Rescue means Atlanta’s patients get help quickly. We have advanced cardiac training that allows us to perform and interpret EKGs in the field, so the hospital’s cardiac team is ready to take life-saving measures as soon as we arrive.

MESSAGE FROM PRESIDENT & CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER, JOHN HAUPERT
Grady is seeing growth every day as we continue to look for innovative and cutting-edge medicine to keep Atlanta healthier.

There is new energy at Grady.

Walk the halls on any given day and you will see that we have added more medical staff, expanded our services and improved the facilities. Today, Grady clinicians have access to leading technology that is available in only a handful of other institutions around the world.

This has made Grady a magnet for some of the nation’s top medical professionals, who are attracted by our mission of serving the community’s unmet medical needs and by the fact that some of our clinics are reinventing the way medicine is practiced every day in order to achieve better patient outcomes more safely.

The change is also making Grady the medical institution of choice for a growing number of patients.

Caring for New Patients

Last year, patient volumes in our Burn Center increased by 45 percent, the Marcus Stroke and Neuroscience center treated 22 percent more patients, we performed 15 percent more cardiac catheterizations, orthopedic volumes grew by 14 percent and our outpatient specialty centers experienced a volume increase of 15 percent. This growth is unprecedented in Grady’s history.

We’re seeing more first-time patients for two reasons. First, physicians at more than 80 hospitals across the region routinely refer their patients to us who are beyond their own medical capabilities, confident that Grady can care for them. Second, more Atlanta area patients from all walks of life and socioeconomic backgrounds are entrusting their health to Grady.

At a time when government reimbursement is uncertain, the growing diversity of Grady’s payer mix is critically important. It means that Grady generates revenues from Medicare, private insurers and other sources, ensuring that we have the financial stability needed to continue our mission to care for underserved populations.

New Patients: New Opportunities

But let me be clear, these patients are more than numbers on a spreadsheet to us. They are votes of confidence by the region’s patients and physicians. Each patient who seeks treatment here trusts Grady will provide the best medical care available — a standard of care that few other institutions can aspire to.

These new patients confirm the correctness of our investments and improvements. They also demonstrate a renewed faith in the quality of our care and the superiority of our staff.

What makes Grady unique is that our medical staff — comprised of working physicians on the faculties of Emory and Morehouse schools of medicine — provide every patient with the best care available. Each and every day. Regardless of wealth.

Their passion to push the boundaries of medicine continually drives us to achieve greater excellence, improved efficiency and superior outcomes. And we believe this drive complements our traditional mission of being Atlanta’s safety-net hospital.

A Year of Accomplishment, Recognition

That progress extended to all corners of our institution:

- Grady’s cardiac care team is saving more lives thanks to our expansion of STEMI (ST elevation myocardial infarction) services. The expansion allows us to provide round-the-clock care for patients experiencing heart attacks caused by arterial blockages.
- We built our new $76 million emergency center, which will accommodate growing patient demand that overwhelmed Grady’s older emergency department. Last year, the department served over 123,000 patients, a number expected to grow to 135,000 in coming years. The new facilities are already enabling us to treat more patients more quickly and improved door-to-doctor time by 48 percent, and we intend further improvement.
• We began the renovation and expansion of the Women’s Center, a three-phase, $36 million project to improve the patient experience. The initial work will build new labor and delivery suites for family-centered care.

• Grady earned important recognitions and awards. We were named one of only four Baby-Friendly Designated facilities in Georgia, which means we provide optimal care and education for breastfeeding mothers and their babies. We were presented the Mission: Lifeline® Silver Receiving Quality Achievement Award for implementing specific quality improvement measures for the treatment of severe heart attack patients, the Georgia Coverdell Acute Stroke Registry (GCASR) hospital Star Award for improving outcomes for stroke patients, and the Quality and Patient Safety Award from The Partnership for Health and Accountability for an initiative that reduced the incidence of patient falls.

New Leadership to Help Us Blaze Trails
These and Grady’s other accomplishments were achieved through the commitment and dedication of our staff and leadership team. And in 2015 we enhanced that leadership with the addition of Dr. Robert Jansen as chief medical officer and chief of staff.

Jansen, formerly chief administrative medical officer of WellStar Health System, the largest health system in metro Atlanta, is an experienced and highly-regarded physician and healthcare administrator. He will lead clinical and quality efforts to continue Grady’s progress and spearhead ongoing collaboration with our academic partners to take the quality of care and the prominence of clinical care to the next level.

Our management team was also strengthened by combining the responsibilities of chief operating officer and chief nursing officer into a single position that is effectively filled by Dr. Rhonda Scott, who has executed initiatives to improve nursing, patient and physician satisfaction and to enhance nurse recruitment and retention.

During the last several years our board of directors has taken the lead in charting Grady’s course toward financial stability and increased academic and medical quality. No one has been more influential in that effort than Pete Correll, who now concludes his service as board chairman and whose contributions to Grady’s progress are immeasurable.

We are fortunate that a respected community and business leader, Frank Blake, will succeed Pete as chairman.

Each patient who seeks treatment here trusts Grady will provide the best medical care available — a standard of care that few other institutions can aspire to.

The Journey to Continuous Improvement
As I said earlier, Grady has been transformed during the past decade.

Though there is uncertainty about continued federal and state governmental support for the uninsured, we are financially stable, thanks to our embrace of financial discipline and the diversification of our payor base.

We now continue the journey to distinguish Grady as a quality leader, an academic leader and an employer of choice. We have made progress in quality metrics, but much remains to be done. The mission is made more challenging by the fact that many of our patients often lack the resources and support systems to sustain their own recoveries after being discharged from Grady. Similarly, our patient satisfaction scores have improved dramatically since 2008, and we are among the leaders in patient satisfaction among large, public, safety net health systems. However, again, we are committed to further improving our scores.

I am excited about the steady progress Grady is making in its ascent to greater national prominence, in the groundbreaking levels of performance we achieve every day and in the medical breakthroughs we are helping to develop. These are accomplishments never before achieved by a large, safety-net hospital.

They are the product of collaboration between Grady’s executive leadership, our board, thousands of dedicated physicians, nurses, medical professionals and staff and the generosity of donors and volunteers. I am grateful for their contributions, and for their continued efforts to build upon Grady’s success.

Sincerely,

John M. Haupert, FACHE

620,000 PATIENT VISITS
In 2015, Grady’s growth trajectory reached new heights as we recorded significant increases across a wide range of inpatient and outpatient services. Among the drivers of growth: investments in expanded care for cardiac patients, tripling the number of burn surgeons on staff and the growing reputation of the Marcus Stroke and Neuroscience Center. Today, more metro Atlantans are aware of Grady’s unique services and more physicians are referring their patients to Grady for specialized care.
Helping Train Georgia’s Finest Medical Professionals is an Everyday Event for Grady

I’ve lived through a fair amount of history, but very little compares to the sheer drama of Grady’s accomplishments during the past decade.

This hospital has been transformed from an institution on the brink of financial ruin to a thriving public academic medical center. In the past year alone, Grady has invested millions of dollars in new facilities, new technology and new staff. Once viewed as a hospital of last resort for Atlanta, Grady is now seen as a medical institution of choice for a growing number of people.

Many have been instrumental in this transformation. The Grady staff and physicians provided critical support, encouragement and dedication. Their missionary-like zeal, combined with some of the nation’s best medical skills, has consistently delivered quality patient care. Our administrative leaders have instilled financial and professional discipline and a unifying vision. Our volunteer board of directors has provided the encouragement and counsel to help guide progress. Generous donors have made possible unparalleled investment in new technology, facilities and service lines. And the community has been unflagging in its continued support.

I am proud to have played a role in Grady’s transformation. But it is time for me to conclude my service as chairman of the Grady Memorial Hospital Corporation and pass the baton to a new leader, Frank Blake.

Frank, the retired chairman and CEO of The Home Depot, joined the board last year. Since then, he has repeatedly demonstrated his appreciation for Grady and its unique mission. His strong background in management and the law and his extensive experience in public-sector leadership will be tremendous assets to this institution and its stakeholders.

Frank has made a career of building consensus to empower progress. During nearly two decades working with the federal government, he found ways to knit together teams of rivals to achieve common goals. He did the same as chairman of The Home Depot, steering the company through turbulent times to restore its stock performance.

At Grady, his mission as chairman will in some ways be clearer: Continue to focus the institution’s resources on becoming the nation’s best public academic medical center.

In coming years, Grady will be challenged to manage its ongoing growth and the changes imposed by a rapidly-evolving healthcare landscape. Those are the healthy challenges that confront every thriving institution.

I am confident the board will continue to play a central role in shaping strategy, establishing priorities and ensuring that the perspectives of a broad range of community stakeholders are heard. Its mission will continue to be to provide consistent and effective governance. But the most important objective for the board, and everyone else at Grady, will be to look to the future.

Grady’s team of talented individuals will continue to improve our quality of care, patient satisfaction and employee engagement. But we must all redouble our efforts to share reports of Grady’s continuing progress with the people of our region and its business and political leaders. Ultimately, this institution can only succeed if its ongoing progress is widely recognized.

Grady is well positioned to manage its growth in the right way and to further enhance its value to the patients it serves directly and the community whose healthcare is improved by the hospital’s very presence. I’m extremely gratified to have helped to write the last chapter of Grady’s story. And I look forward to reading the next chapter in the years to come.

Sincerely,

Pete Correll

To Our 2015 Donors,

Grady would not be the thriving health system it is today without the support of private donors like you who choose each year to invest in our future. Thanks to the support of over 1,350 of you in 2015, the Grady Health Foundation raised nearly $11.5 million that will go toward capital projects, new programs and continued improvement.

Major gifts received from corporate and philanthropic partners including AstraZeneca, the James M. Cox Foundation, The Home Depot, the O. Wayne Rollins Foundation and the Zeist Foundation will allow Grady to renovate the Women’s Center, create a new community-based cardiac program and enhance emergency training facilities.

In addition to our efforts to secure financial contributions, the Grady Health Foundation is actively working to build community support and raise awareness of Grady’s increasingly critical role in metro Atlanta’s future. The new Grady Ambassador Force, introduced in the fall of 2015 through the engagement of Leadership Atlanta, is composed of nearly 100 civic, business and faith-based leaders from throughout the region — all of whom believe in our mission and are excited to play a role in sustaining Grady’s success.

We are grateful for each and every one of the individuals and organizations listed that made the choice to invest in Grady this past year. We also hope you will join us in thanking the Grady Health Foundation Board of Directors for their leadership and commitment.

For information about the Grady Health Foundation, please visit www.gradyhealthfoundation.org.
“The advances made by Grady Health System in the past five years have been transformative for the metro Atlanta region and beyond. It is remarkable that Grady is retaining its safety-net mission while simultaneously growing state-of-the-art clinical programs that impact our patients and communities and support teaching and discovery for the next generation of physicians.”

-Katherine L. Heilpern, MD
“Grady Health System is not just a public hospital, but a world-renowned academic health system, which not only benefits Atlanta, but this region. I support Grady to contribute to the continued growth of expert healthcare, medical collaborative studies and community programs. Thank you, Grady!”

ABOUT GRADY

Sitting in the heart of downtown Atlanta, Grady Health System leads the way as the Southeast’s most essential healthcare provider. We’ve been an innovator since opening our doors in 1892, and providing cutting-edge care to all patients who need us continues to be our mission to this very day. Our singular objective is to become the nation’s finest public academic healthcare system. We know we can only deliver against that objective by providing outstanding, personalized care – one patient at a time – to every person we are honored to serve.
